
Quest 10: NVC

Nonviolent Communication

Time: 1-2 hours initial, then ongoing practice | Reward: 111 $ReGen + 1 RVoice

Deliverable:

A written reflection, video, or recorded conversation showing your NVC practice

The Story

Quest 10 teaches us to speak from needs rather than judgments, to hear others without taking their pain as an attack, and to coordinate meeting shared needs together. This is the bridge from individual healing into collective co-creation. Every governance system, every community, every partnership becomes more functional when the people inside it know how to communicate in this way.

Step by Step

Step 1: Take the NVC Course

Find the recommended NVC materials and study them. Online courses, Marshall Rosenberg's books, and free recordings of his workshops are all valid starting points.

Step 2: Practice the Four Components

Observation, Feeling, Need, Request. Apply them in your daily conversations. Start with low-stakes situations before bringing them into high-stakes ones.

Step 3: Find a Practice Partner

NVC practiced alone is limited. Find someone else to study and practice with. Many cities have NVC practice circles, or find a partner in our forum.

Step 4: Apply in a Real Situation

Bring NVC into a genuine conflict or tension in your life. Not to win. To connect.

Step 5: Reflect and Share

Write or record a reflection on what you learned. What shifted? Where did it get hard? What would you tell someone just starting?

Step 6: Attend or Host a Community Session

The forum has regular NVC discussion threads. Participate. If there is no session happening, start one.

Tips

- The hardest part is distinguishing observations from evaluations. Practice this first.
- Saying I feel like you do not care is not a feeling - it is an interpretation. I feel hurt and lonely is a feeling.

- Gratitude is also NVC. Practice expressing gratitude in terms of what needs were met.
