Letting Burn What No Longer Serves

regencivics.earth

What This Quest Is

The entry point to the Infinite Game. Before we build anything new, we clear. Fire transmutes instantly. Stories, maladaptations, and perspectives that no longer serve us can be released in a single ceremony. This quest is your starting point — the you before the journey began.

Story Card

We start with the fire. We live in a time when it is getting harder and harder to know what is real. More effective and more personalized propaganda means the logical mind alone cannot keep up. Fire offers a different path: discerning truth directly, from our own relationship to ourselves and to life. Who are you? Like the rest of us — nobody. And like the rest of us, a whole person on a path to remembering that wholeness. The fire is where that remembering begins.

How To Do This Quest

Step 1: Sit with fire.

Literally if you can. A candle works. A fire pit is better. Spend at least 20-30 minutes just watching it. Let your mind wander. Do not try to think productively. Just be with the fire.

Step 2: Journal without editing.

Write for at least 20 minutes without stopping. What are you carrying that is no longer yours? What stories have you inherited that you did not choose? What would you burn if you could? What lights you up?

Step 3: Identify what to release.

From what you wrote, identify 1-3 things you are genuinely ready to release. A belief. A story. A pattern. A role. Write each one on a piece of paper.

Step 4: Burn it.

Safely and with intention. Speak each thing aloud as you offer it to the fire. Take your time.

Step 5: Write your fire.

After the burning, write freely about what you are moving toward. What you want to build. What lights you up. What you would do if the old story were truly gone.

Step 6: Create and share.

Turn your fire story into a video (3 minutes or less), a written piece, or a voice recording. Share it with the community. Then submit in the Game Space to claim your tokens.

Deliverable

A video, article, or voice recording sharing your fire and what you released.

Tips

- Be real. The community can tell the difference between a genuine fire and a performance.
- If you find it hard to name what to release, start with something small.
- You can return to this quest. Burning is not a one-time act. Many players do a fire ceremony each season.
