What This Quest Is

Make a healing potion to connect your gut to the ancient wisdom of your bioregion. Fermented foods, medicinal preparations, and living biology that changes how you think, feel, and perceive.

Story Card

Your gut is not just a digestive organ. It has its own nervous system — around 100 million neurons, more than your spinal cord. Scientists call it the enteric nervous system, the second brain. Your heart has a similar network: 40,000 neurons processing information independently before it reaches your head. Three minds. All of them influenced by what you eat, drink, and ferment. The potion you make is both medicine and initiation.

How To Do This Quest

Step 1: Watch the video.

The tutorial video walks you through making a potion. Follow along before you start experimenting on your own.

Step 2: Choose your potions.

Select 1-3 healing herbs or ferments to make and showcase. Work with what is available in your bioregion.

Step 3: Gather your ingredients.

Source locally where possible. Farmers markets, foraged (only what you can identify with certainty), or your own garden.

Step 4: Make your potions.

Document the process as you go. Photos, short video clips, notes. What did you make? What is the tradition or logic behind this preparation?

Step 5: Taste, feel, notice.

After taking your potion, sit with it. What do you notice? Any immediate effects? How does your gut feel? Continue reflecting over the next days.

Step 6: Share your showcase.

Create a short video or article showing your potions, how you made them, and what you noticed. Post it and add the link to your game space proposal.

Deliverable

A 'Showcasing My Potions' video or article, posted publicly and submitted in the Game Space.

Tips

- You do not have to be an expert herbalist. Beginners make the most honest content.
- The three minds framework (gut, heart, head) is worth reading about before you start.
- Wild ferments use wild yeast and bacteria from your local environment.
